Driving for a living in the Washington DC area, I have greatly benefitted from the constant and in-depth, local traffic information provided by XM. This service provides such a vital need to the consumer that is currently not being met by local radio stations. Of over 30 radio stations in the area, approximately two, provide traffic information more than twice an hour. And even on those two stations, the reports are minor highlights of the entire area due to time constraints. Since I pay for the right to hear the information provided on XM, there is absolutely no reason to discontinue its availability.
